Abstract:

ELT in Mexico: Making our Future or Taking Whatever?

Since the dawn of times, humans have always been curious about the future and English teachers are not an exception. The reasons for this fascination with fate are many: be prepared for what will come, try to change what is in store for us, or simply get answers to our questions. This session will explore different possibilities that may lay ahead and pose the question of whether we can shape our own future.

About the speaker:

José Manuel Villafuerte holds a BA in English Literature and an MBA. A teacher since 1988, he has also been a teacher trainer, program coordinator, editor of ELT materials, teaching consultant and author of a popular workbook series. He currently works for the Office of English Language Programs, US Embassy.
